

PRE-CONFERENCE 2021

Wednesday 10 November from 9:00 – 12.40 Central European Time.

Mental health conditions - a global challenge at work and to social security systems.

Mental health conditions are common in the work force. The association between mental health conditions and work is intrinsic. There is strong evidence that poor working conditions lead to depression and burnout while work can be a major contribution to mental well-being and social network. Defining and delimit mental disorders and capacity to work are challenging in research. This pre-conference will give new perspective on mental health at work. And some time for discussion!

SPEAKERS	PRESENTATIONS
Eiko Fried , associate professor at Leiden University, The Netherlands https://eiko-fried.com/	How to best understand and measure mental health problems.
Monica Bertilsson , senior lecturer and Gunnel Hensing , professor at Gothenburg University, Sweden	Capacity to work in relation to common mental disorders.
Stephen Stansfeld , Queen Mary University of London, United Kingdom	Commentary
Manal Azzi , Senior Occupational Safety and Health Specialist, International Labour Organization (ILO)	The management of work-related psychosocial risks during the pandemic.

You're most welcome to this thought provoking and important pre-conference on one of the most challenging public health problems of our time.

Learn more about the EPH conference and register for participation at <https://ephconference.eu/>

The participation fee is set at 50 EURO.