We - the EUPHA Sections on Environment and Health (EH), Public Mental Health (PMH), Urban Public Health (UPH) - are organizing a joint, full-day, pre-Conference at EPH19 Marseille, about the topic of HEALTHY PLACES: Research, Strategies and Policies towards Healthy Places and Healthy People.

AIMS. The overall goal of the pre-Conference is to review and update knowledge of built environment’s health impacts and risks factors, on population’s health status. Specifically, we aim to:
- describe the key role of the built environment and the air quality on health, independently and jointly;
- identify vulnerable groups;
- identify construction and design choices, which contribute to positive health outcomes;
- analyse and evaluate these factors, investigating additionally social factors.

METHODS. The goal and the aims will be reached by bringing together experts coming from different areas, such as Public Health, Mental Health, Urban Health and Environmental Health researchers and practitioners, with designers, urban planners and architects. Therefore, the pre-Conference is jointly organized by three EUPHA Sections: Environment and Health, Public Mental Health and Urban Public Health.

EXPECTED OUTCOME. Through this pre-Conference, we expect to enhance knowledge and develop a research and policy agenda. The pre-Conference output will be a sort of Declaration, referring how to promote research and practice in the field of Environmental, Urban and Mental Health, working jointly towards “Healthy Places for All”. At this session we will discuss which measures can be taken at an urban level, in order to reduce health risks factors. How to improve health by making the living environment more linked to a healthy lifestyle. And, finally, how to design a sustainable environment.
